

Michigan Graduate Medical Education Fast Facts

What is GME?

Graduate medical education (GME) is a formal, hospital-sponsored or hospital-based training program for individuals who have completed medical school and earned an M.D. or D.O. degree. It includes residency, internship, fellowship, specialty and subspecialty programs. Completion leads to physician state licensure and board certification, allowing physicians to further their medical education while delivering much-needed care to patients throughout Michigan.

There are more than 7,200
physician residents
currently working in Michigan.<sup>1</sup>

The average length of GME training at teaching hospitals is
3-7 years.

The average starting salary for a resident is $63,800,
paid by the training institution and partially with state GME funds.<sup>2</sup>

Michigan has the 4th most GME
residents and fellows per capita in the U.S. and ranks 7th in the country in the number of physician residents.<sup>3, 4</sup>

In fiscal year 2024, every $1 Michigan
invests in GME generates

$1.85
in federal funding.

GME funds do not pay for medical school tuition.

Physician residents are licensed physicians who have completed medical school. They work in teaching hospitals, community clinics and laboratories.
