

Safety & Quality Symposium

MHA KEYSTONE CENTER

Oct. 14, 2026 | DoubleTree, Lansing

The Michigan Health & Hospital Association (MHA) is pleased to announce the MHA Keystone Center Safety & Quality Symposium, designed for chief medical and nursing officers and leaders across safety, quality, risk management and clinical improvement. The symposium includes content-rich sessions for attendees to explore proven methods to reduce workplace violence and improve worker safety. Nationally recognized keynote speakers are:

Bryan Sexton, PhD, medical associate professor in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences Duke University School of Medicine, and director, Duke Center for the Advancement of Well-being Science

Brian Uridge, senior director, Department of Public Safety & Security, Michigan Medicine

SAVE THE DATE

Attendees at the 2026 MHA Keystone Center Safety & Quality Symposium will:

- Recognize the connection between physical and psychological safety.
- Discuss methods to promote worker safety efforts, ensure accountability and encourage continuous safety improvement initiatives.
- Understand the roles trust, training and technology play in aligning people and policies to create safer environments.
- Examine programs that train managers to recognize behaviors of employees in distress and deploy psychological first aid and critical incident stress management.
- Network with other Michigan-based clinical leaders.
- Engage with healthcare vendors to explore products and solutions that address challenges and improve safety and quality.

▶ Registration will open in early summer. Up-to-date event information can be found on MHA.org.